16 Carrying Out the Gameplan

Bylaw 27 requires coaches to pass a CPR class and a sports safety course. This knowledge helped save a life when Pleasure Ridge Park coaches Megan Miller, Derek Mattingly and Rich Hawks sprang into action.

15 Athletic Participation Reaches All-Time High

The number of students participating in high school sports reached its highest numbers since the NFHS began tracking participation more than 40 years ago.

23 Record funds raised for Coaches Vs. Cancer

Students from Danville High School had a unique opportunity to help out those in need on a recent trip to tornado-ravaged Alabama.
COMMISSIONER’S LETTER

It’s important that we never forget the reason why we enter any profession that serves as a model for young people. We do this for more than a paycheck, more than the thrill of a win and more than the chance to set policy. We do this because we can be a part of something larger than ourselves, the chance to mentor the next generation that now occupies the seats we once sat in for fifth period English.

Being a mentor is not something we should take lightly. Sometimes we find ourselves in life or death situations and we only have our training to pull us through. Luckily, a trio of teachers at Pleasure Ridge Park High School knew what to do when a student began to have difficulty breathing and passed out. Through their quick thinking and selfless actions and based on many hours of preparatory training, a student is alive to enjoy his family and life as a young person.

Perhaps that’s why we really shouldn’t be surprised to see the NFHS participation numbers this year. Yes, students enjoy the opportunity to participate but I can’t help but think they want to give more of themselves because they see those they look up to doing the same. Keep setting the example.

Participation in high school sports increased for the 22nd consecutive school year in 2010-11, according to the annual High School Athletics Participation Survey conducted by the National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS).

Based on figures from the 50 state high school athletic/activity associations, plus the District of Columbia, that are members of the NFHS, sports participation for the 2010-11 school year reached another record-breaking total of 7,667,955 participants.

Boys and girls participation figures also reached respective all-time highs with 4,494,406 boys and 3,173,549 girls participating in 2010-11 – an overall increase of 39,578 participants from 2009-10.

“While the overall increase was not as much as we’ve seen in the past few years, we are definitely encouraged with these totals given the financial challenges facing our nation’s high schools,” said Bob Gardner, NFHS executive director. “The benefits of education-based athletics at the high school level are well-documented, and we encourage communities throughout the nation to keep these doors of opportunity open.

“Based on the survey, 55.5 percent of students enrolled in high schools participate in athletics, which emphasizes and reinforces the idea that high school sports continue to have a significant role in student involvement in schools across the country.”

Cross country and outdoor track and field gained the most participants in boys sports last year, with increases of 7,340 and 7,179, respectively. Other boys sports with significant jumps were soccer (6,512), basketball (5,637) and lacrosse (5,013). Three sports with lower overall participation totals registered large percentage gains in 2010-11 – fencing (up 38 percent to 2,027 participants), weightlifting (up 12 percent to 22,161 participants) and badminton (up 9.4 percent to 4,693 participants).

Among girls sports, the emerging sport of lacrosse led the way with an additional 6,155 participants, followed by basketball (545,844), baseball (471,025), soccer (398,351), wrestling (246,948), tennis (161,367), golf (156,866) and swimming and diving (133,900).

Outdoor track and field was the top sport for girls again last year with 475,265 participants, followed by basketball (438,933), volleyball (373,535), soccer (361,556), cross country (204,653), tennis (182,074), swimming and diving (160,881), competitive spirit squads (96,718) and lacrosse (74,927).

Although the rise in girls participation numbers was not as large this past year (due, in part, to significant drops in competitive spirit numbers in two states), the percentage increase rate has more than doubled the rate for boys during the past 20 years.

Training, timing combine

Pleasure Ridge Park coaches use CPR to save a student’s life

More than 12,000 people in Kentucky carry the title of coach at the high school level. Before they can do so, however, all coaches must successfully complete a course in CPR and a sports safety course.

To aspiring coaches, it sounds simple, almost an afterthought. Just part of the fine print, a sort of procedural ‘i’ dotting and ‘t’ crossing before hitting the field.

Megan Miller admits there were times while sitting for hours in a CPR training class when she wondered how much was enough. The Pleasure Ridge Park softball coach had been to the training multiple times, seen and heard the same procedures discussed and dutifully completed her obligation.

Now, in hindsight, she says there is no such thing as too many times.

On the first day of school, Miller was making her way back to her classroom from the gymnasium between fourth and fifth period. She was talking to Rich Hawks, a PRP teacher and assistant baseball coach, when a student ran up to them and said another student, Cody Aikin, had collapsed in the courtyard and was having a seizure.

“At that point, we’re fighting each other to get out the door. We’re thinking he’s had a seizure,” Miller said. “When we got there, it was not a seizure. His color was starting to change and he was turning blue.

“Less than month before we had our CPR recertification. So we went through the steps and started administering CPR but he never really gained full breathing sounds. We did it for probably 10 minutes while coach (David) Bobb called 9-1-1 when we realized it was more than we could handle. It probably took about 10 minutes for EMS to arrive. In meantime, I was doing chest compression and coach Hawks kept his airways open.”

Once Miller tired and could no longer do the chest compression, another coach, assistant baseball coach Derek Mattingly, took over until paramedics arrived and used a defibrillator on Aikin. Miller estimates from beginning to end, the episode lasted maybe 15 minutes. However, even seconds felt like an eternity. There was no time to think about their training – once the seriousness of the moment became apparent; there was only time to act.

“Even though I had gone through the training several times, I have questions now (after performing CPR) that I never would have had before because I wouldn’t have known to ask,” she said “The entire time we were doing it we were wondering if we were doing it right even though we know how to do it. The entire time there’s doubts. Am I compressing too hard? Do I continue this way if the compression isn’t working? There’s no time to think in that situation.”

Paramedics took over and transported Aikin to Kosair Children’s Hospital. Miller and Hawks visited him that night but he had not regained consciousness at that point. Only when they visited again later that week and saw him sitting up and talking in his bed did they have the chance to decompress and deal with the emotion of the situation.

“We went up and met his family and got to see him. He was sedated and we weren’t 100 percent sure that even with everything we did, he was going to make it. We met his family and they were more than grateful and overwhelmed,” Miller said. “The second time, he was sitting up and on his computer. When we saw that it was a complete and total sigh of relief. Cody doesn’t say much about it but he’s a shy kid anyway. He doesn’t remember anything that happened from the end of fourth period on and I’d say without a doubt that’s a blessing.”

There is a fine line between triumph and tragedy. While it is something all three coaches involved hope they never have to do again, several factors were in Cody Aikin’s favor that day.

The spot where he collapsed in the courtyard was no more than 50 feet away from Miller’s and Hawks’ classrooms at the end of the corridor, a hallway filled with teachers and coaches who knew how to administer CPR. Aikin was on his way to his fifth period class in the tech building, a separate structure nearly 200 yards from the main high school building across the main driveway. Given time to take it all in, it’s a scenario that plays through Miller’s head often.

“I still think about it. It is still pretty surreal what all happened. He might or might not have made it if it had been a different part of the school. If it had happened 100 yards somewhere else or with different teachers without CPR training, it might have been different,” she said. “It was such an emotional and trying thing we went through. Until we got to see him and he was awake the second time, it really didn’t hit home until then and it was something I’ll never forget. I will never wish what we did on our worst enemy. I don’t see how police and EMS do this on a daily basis.”

For their quick thinking and efforts in saving Aikin’s life, Hawks, Mattingly and Miller were recognized for their efforts at a Louisville Metro Council meeting. Though the story has a positive outcome, the only way it happened was the perfect convergence of timing and training. In other words, the fine print of being a coach.

“I would say prior to this happening, I used to say I’ll never use it, why do I need to know how to use it? Why do I need to get recertified? After using it, I understand the importance of it and I see why coaches have to get recertified,” Miller said. “When you have to use it, you want to make sure you are doing it correctly because then you don’t have time to think.

“Coaches are put in pressure situations all the time so we probably react better in those situations that someone else might. But having the training is so important.”

KHSAA Bylaw 27
Sec. 3) Post Hire Requirements and Requirements for Continuing Coaching Duties
a) C.P.R. and AED Training
All coaches (head and assistant) at any level in all sanctioned sports and sport activities (including cheerleading) shall provide documentation of successful completion of a C.P.R. course including the use of an Automatic External Defibrillator and the requisite First Aid Training, as approved by a college or University, the American Red Cross, American Heart Association or other bona fide accrediting agency. Initial certification shall use in-person instruction and certification shall be timely and appropriately updated as required by the approving agency.

The fifth edition of the annual Whitaker Bank Mountain Coaches vs. Cancer Classic charity basketball games at Perry Central broke the previous record of gate receipts donated to the Jimmy “V” Cancer Foundation.

This year’s doubleheader at Perry Central’s John C. Combs Arena raised $2,320 in gate receipts plus two $100 donations. The previous high, last year’s event at Letcher County Central, raised $2,120.

In association with this year’s Cancer Classic events the brother Ira and Harold Combs, along with Whitaker Bank, announced the recipients of the annual Cancer Survivor Awards which is presented annually to a former coach and/or player who has overcome a bout with cancer in their past to go on and lead a productive and normal life.

This year after some long careful and deliberate research it was found that three former Perry County coaches had survived a bout with the dreaded disease.

In between games there were ceremonies for former Buckhorn High School coaches Pat Wooten and John Paul Amis as well as former Dilce Combs coach J.R. Noe, who were presented with Cancer Survivor plaques.

A special thank you to the boys basketball coaches from Buckhorn, Perry Central, Powell Co., and Riverside Christian high schools for bringing their teams to participate and help raise money for the Jimmy “V” Cancer Foundation.
In Memoriam

Danny White (1952-2011)

Kentucky’s football coaches, athletic directors and student-athletes lost a friend, a colleague and an ally with Danny White’s passing on Sept. 15.

For more than three decades White, or simply ‘Coach White’ as he was affectionately called by hundreds of students, dedicated his time to the youth of Jefferson County as a coach and later athletic director.

White’s teaching and coaching career spanned more than 30 years. White was an assistant football coach for several years before getting his first shot as head coach at Pleasure Ridge Park in 1982. From there White moved on to Moore High School where he coached the Mustangs from 1989-1992. White’s 1989 team finished 7-4, earning him Jefferson County Class 4A coach of the Year honors. He followed this with a 6-4 season in 1990.

White turned his attention to administration and later served as athletic director at Southern High School for a number of years. He also assisted with the athletic programs at Shawnee after his retirement. For his service he was elected to the KHSADA Hall of Fame.

“I knew Danny almost from the moment I started with the Association in 1984 and he was a character and I mean that in the highest sense of the word,” said KHSAA Commissioner Julian Tackett. “Being a football coach at heart, he could get after you but he always put it aside once the whistle blew and there was never a bigger ally for the kids of Jefferson County. If I ever needed anything I never hesitated to call on Danny and he delivered.”

White graduated from DuPont Manual High School in 1970 and later went on to earn a degree from Western Kentucky University, where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha.

White is survived by Patricia Ann White, his wife of 36 years and children Erin White, Jocelyn Fedyk and son Danny White.

David Wheeler (1955-2011)

Seldom has the term a man for all seasons fit someone better than it did for David Wheeler. If there was a sporting event going on within the 15th Region chances are Wheeler was officiating it.

Wheeler, who passed away on Nov. 1, was a veteran KHSAA official who worked a variety of sports. Throughout his long and varied career, Wheeler acquired a combined 69 years of experience in six different sports.

Wheeler earned level 3 official status in four different sports and worked multiple state tournaments for softball and volleyball.

His longest tenure was baseball, where he served as an umpire for 18 years. He also worked as a fast pitch umpire and volleyball official for 14 years, a basketball referee for 10 years, a track and field official for nine years and a football official for four years.

Wheeler is survived by his wife Diana Davis Wheeler and a son, Daniel Perry Robert Wheeler, both of Paintsville.
