Hot WeatherHints

A Comment by the National Federation of State High School Associations and the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Sports of the American Medical Association.

Early fall football practice frequently is conducted in very warm and highly humid weather in many parts of the United States. Under such conditions, special precautions should be observed. Otherwise, the athlete is subject to:

a) Heat Cramps, depletion of electrolytes
b) Heat Fatigue, depletion of salt and water due to sweating
c) Heat Exhaustion, excessive depletion of salt and water
d) Heat Stroke, overheating from breakdown of the sweating mechanism

Heat cramps are only temporarily disabling, but the moment of occurrence may be significant. Heat fatigue dulls the athlete’s skillful alertness and makes him more vulnerable to injury. The other two heat illnesses can result in serious physical harm and even death; both are preventable.

Heat exhaustion and heat stroke are preventable only by careful control of various factors in the conditioning program of the athlete. Basic, of course, is adequate health history and health examination prior to participation in practice. With the start of fall practice, it is essential to provide for gradual acclimation to hot weather activity. Equally important is the need to adjust salt and water intake to weather conditions.

As the athlete becomes accustomed to hot activity, he perspires more freely (and thus dissipates body heat) and excretes less salt (and thus conserves sodium). With a graduated training regimen, such acclimation can be expected to take place over a period of about one week.

The old idea that water should be withheld from athletes during workouts has no scientific foundation. In fact, such restriction, by depleting water in the body, can lead to heat fatigue and serious illness. During exercise in the heat, it is essential to replace— at least hourly the water lost by perspiration.

Salt also needs to be replaced daily, particularly during the acclimation period. Extra salting of the athlete’s food within the bounds of taste will accomplish this purpose. Salt tablets, particularly on an empty stomach, can be irritating and may be poorly absorbed. Adding one teaspoon of salt to six quarts of flavored water used for drinking during hot-weather workouts offers another approach.

Even after acclimation, it is advisable to alternate periods of strenuous exercise with periods of rest during hot weather. Also, it is important for the coach to observe his athletes carefully for signs of lethargy, inattention, stupor, awkwardness, or unusual fatigues. Symptoms of water and salt depletion may include sluggishness, headache, nausea, hallucinations, and/or weak and rapid pulse. If heat illness is suspected, prompt attention to recommended emergency procedures outlined at the end of this statement may have vital importance.*

The following suggestions are offered to help coaches prevent heat exhaustion and heat stroke during hot-weather athletic activity.

1) Require a careful medical history and checkup prior to the beginning of practice.
2) Schedule workouts during cooler morning and early evening hours in hot weather. (Heat exhaustion and heat stroke can occur in the shade.)
3) Acclimate athletes to hot-weather activity by carefully graduated practice schedules.
4) Provide rest periods of 15 to 30 minutes during workouts of an hour or more in hot weather.
5) Supply clothing that is white to reflect heat, brief, loose and comfortable to permit heat escape, and permeable to moisture to allow heat loss via sweat evaporation.
6) Furnish extra salt and water in recommended amounts during hot weather.
7) Watch athletes carefully for signs of trouble, particularly interior linemen and the determined athlete who may not report discomfort.
8) Remember that temperature and humidity, not the sun, are the crucial factors. Measuring the relative humidity, by use of a sling psychrometer on the field, is advantageous in this regard.*
9) Know what to do in case of such an emergency, including immediate first aid practices and pre-arranged procedures for obtaining medical care.
10) Outlaw the hazardous warm weather use of rubberized apparel or other dehydration devices by players.

Some teams encounter hot weather during the season either through intersectional travel or following an unseasonable cool period. By this time, the athlete should be physically fit; nevertheless, they will not be environmentally fit. Coaches who face this situation are advised to schedule practices preceding the game at the warmest time of the day, to diligently subscribe to the other recommendations above, and to substitute during the game more frequently than normal. The result will benefit the team’s performance as well as the health of the athletes.

* First Aid Chart for Athletic Injuries. American Medical Association, 1965;

HEAT ILLNESS:

Heat Stroke – Collapse – with dry warm skin—indicates sweating mechanism failure and rising body temperature. THIS IS AN EMERGENCY. DELAY COULD BE FATAL. Immediately cool athlete by the most expedient means (immersion in cool water is a good method). Obtain medical care at once.

Heat Exhaustion – Weakness – with profuse sweating—indicates state of shock due to depletion of salt and water. Place in shade with head level or lower than body. Give sips of dilute salt water in conscious. Obtain medical care at once.

CAN ATHLETIC INJURIES AND COST OF ATHLETIC INSURANCE BE REDUCED?

HERE ARE SOME SUGGESTIONS THAT WILL HELP:

1. Secure a team physician. Your local Medical Society can advise on this.

2. Require players to be physically fit and well conditioned before engaging in contact.

3. Do not allow a player with an injury to participate until he has medical approval to do so.

4. Make sure equipment is adequate, in good condition, and that it is properly worn.

5. Consider carefully the length of practice sessions. The latter part of lengthy sessions produces the most injuries.

6. Require injuries to be reported to you promptly and refer those needing attention to the physician at once.

7. Get your players interested in injury prevention and fitness. Any player is more valuable without casts and crutches.

8. Our COOPERATIVE FOOTBALL PLAN and Student Insurance provide excellent coverage, service and economy.
