Changes Expected To Add Excitement And Strategy To The Sport

High school wrestling will be more exciting and safer than ever as a result of rule changes announced by the National Federation Wrestling Rules Committee for the 1985-86 season. The interscholastic rules-making body formulated and approved rule changes and modifications during two days of meetings March 19-20 in Kansas City at National Federation headquarters.

The use of rubber-type suits were added to the list of artificial heating devices that are currently listed in the rules. "The rubber, vinyl or plastic-type suits with elastic around all openings tend to eliminate the body from breathing," said Fritz McGinness, assistant director of the National Federation and liaison to the wrestling rules committee, in explaining the safety measure. "The suits can be very dangerous to an individual wearing them while working out."

The committee also discussed the 275-pound weight limitation on heavyweights which goes into effect beginning with the 1985-86 season and affirmed its original decision. The weight limitation will apply to all individuals in the high school wrestling program.

In another move, the rules committee changed the time period for "weigh-ins" for tournament competitions from two and one-half hours to one hour.

"The committee has been greatly concerned about the actual time period between weigh-ins and wrestling competition," explained McGinness. "This change moves the weigh-in closer to competition and in the best interest of the sport."

McGinness added that another benefit of the rule change would be a reduction in loss of school time.

The committee also introduced one new scoring change which now allows for a technical fall to be scored the same as a fall when the margin of score is 15 or more points. The measure was overwhelmingly supported by the wrestling questionnaire which reflected nearly a two-to-one margin from all coaches and officials providing input.

Two changes that were approved in starting positions are expected to provide renewed excitement and strategy to the sport. The first change now allows the offensive wrestler to start in a standing position with both hands on the back of the defensive wrestler. The other revision permits the wrestler who has the choice of position to select the up, down or neutral position at the start of the second or third period.

The complete list of rule changes which will effect approximately 250,000 participants at over 8,200 schools during the 1985-86 season are as follows:

What is a Qualified Sport Official?

By Richard McVay

This article is a reprint from the “Ohio High School Athlete”

Constant study and review of the rules and mechanics is demanded if we ever hope to become classified as top flight officials. In addition, we must remind ourselves that to most effectively control a game we must constantly develop these important factors: courage, integrity, calmness, poise, hustle, emotional maturity, humbleness, common sense, politeness, good judgement and a sense of loyalty. Each is important to our position and must be developed to enable the official to create the proper atmosphere throughout a game.

1. Courage is the ability to defend the decision and not to alibi, but to admit a poor or bad decision and never ignore the responsibility to make a difficult decision.

2. Integrity is the ability to be honest with yourself, fellow officials, coaches and players.

3. Calmness is the ability to never become emotionally involved, regardless of circumstances. Be able to remain composed and calm others. Soothe, don’t excite.

4. Poise is the ability to know what you are doing, to be at the right place at the right time, and take control of any situation that may develop.

5. Hustling is the ability to keep moving for a better position to make a call and the ability to never let a game lag.

6. Emotional maturity is the ability to control your emotions both on and off the field. Always remain neutral in any situation. You are an official and biased opinions are not in order.

7. Humbleness is the ability to always adjust yourself to the level of the person with whom you are dealing. Being able to accept praise or reprimand.

8. Common sense is the ability to do and call the logical thing.

9. Politeness is the ability to wear a pleasant look at all times. Be pleasant and greet everyone politely—always using good manners.

10. Good judgment is the ability to feel out the play in its entirety; the planning, fundamentals and strategy that were employed when you made the call.

All of these factors may sound very basic to us, but we must recognize their importance. Unless we are able to incorporate all of these, our efforts fail miserably. We must always have command of ourselves and radiate poise. Exhibit confidence. These factors will create confidence in you as an official which in turn will breed respect in players, coaches and your fellow officials. Place everyone at ease, attract their confidence and your job will be much easier.

Officials must excel in their compartment on the field. This just might be the most effective characteristic—that is the manner in which he comports himself when carrying out his duties. Develop movements that devote sureness, thereby, transmitting a feeling of confidence. To accomplish this, we must often use our voice supplemental with proper signals for clarity. This is where we must concentrate. Never become emotionally involved to the point where you may use vulgarity to players and coaches. Never lose your composure. Make every effort to control emotions by using methods which have a quieting and calming effect on the concerned party(ies). Losing composure and reverting to vulgarity indicates the weakness of the official involved. Remember—a firm, courteous, positive, calming approach will disarm and relax players and coaches while belligerency only arouses animosity.

Rule application is the most important and should go without amplification. Every official should know the rules perfectly. Knowing the rules perfectly, however, does not in itself guarantee good officiating. The most effective officials, when exercising their rules knowledge, will incorporate the necessary common sense demanded in rules administration. What I am saying is incidental or purely technical infractions, that is, any action by the players which would constitute an infraction of the rules if interpreted literally but which do not adversely affect an opponent or the progress of the game should be ignored. To do otherwise makes a farce of the game. We all know that there is a foul (rule infraction on every play) if we interpret the rules literally. I am not saying to be too permissive, flag those fouls that have a direct bearing on the play. Know the rules. Administer them with common sense.

Another point of comment is criticism of fellow officials. How often have we heard “we are no stronger than our weakest link”? It may sound corny, but it is definitely a true statement when referring to officiating. Criticism by the media invariably reflects on the work of the officials and very rarely on the individual involved. This being true, demands individual mental and physical preparation, but more importantly we must have the ability to incorporate the results of this individual preparation into the teamwork of the crew. All crews are made up of individuals, but to be effective we must be molded into one strong unit. This can only be accomplished by recognizing the abilities of each crew member and make the adjustments necessary to insure a “well oiled machine.” To accomplish this demands complete cooperation of every crew member. We must be able to criticize and be criticized by our fellow crew members. To become strong officials we must be totally honest with one another. Officials are not infallible and will make errors; therefore, we must recognize this fact and willingly accept the criticism resulting. Never will making excuses or denying an error benefit the individual or the crew. All it can do is hurt both. Always remember you are judged as a crew of officials more often than as an individual. We can never be above criticism in this avocation if we hope to improve.

(In officiating) Maturity Equals Humility

Each official should do everything in his power to assure the players the quality officiating they deserve. This includes the officials with many years of experience as well as the first year men. Unless you continue your dedication and recognize there is always room for improvement, you are due for a rude awakening which will hurt the players, coaches and your fellow officials. Maturity in officiating comes from many years of officiating. One or two seasons of experience is just that—"Experience." The mature official recognizes that regardless of the success he has had in the past—it is just that—success in the past. Your next game is where you prove your ability since very few remember what you have done in the past. Unless you have benefited from your past experience and used it as a means to improve, you have very little chance of maturing in officiating.

Self-Inventory

We should take self-inventory each year. In doing so, I would like to pose a few questions to you concerning football officiating.
1. Is officiating a dedication and commitment to the game of football?
2. Does officiating give you a deep satisfaction and personal reward?
3. Do you give your best regardless of competing teams or the score?
4. Are you prepared mentally, physically, and emotionally for every game?
5. Do you place the welfare of the players and game above your crew?
6. Are your actions on and off the field beyond reproach?
7. Are you a contributing member to your crew?
8. Do you use the common sense approach in officiating?
9. Do you administer your duties in a professional and business-like manner?
10. How do you demonstrate your respect for the players and the game?

Nine of these ten questions should be answered "yes." The other is answerable only by your self-inventory. If you cannot answer "yes" to those questions, you had better do some soul-searching.

Finally, take a close look at yourself! Are you one of those officials who thinks they have reached a level of competency beyond reproach? Beware, if you do, because you are in for quite a humbling experience. Remember, regardless of what impression you have of your ability there is still room for improvement. That we get from constant study and review, plus taking advantage of our experience and remember always accept success (if any) with a great deal of humility.

McVay began his football officiating career in 1959 by taking the exam and becoming an OHSAA licensed official. In 1965 he began officiating collegiate football in the Ohio Athletic Conference. Several years later he again moved up the officiating ladder to the Missouri Valley Conference and then the Mid-American Conference. In 1974 he received that very special phone call—from the Big Ten Office. Rich served as a conference official for nine years. On January 1, 1982, he received one of the greatest honors an official can have. He was the Big Ten's selection to referee the Rose Bowl.

In the fall of 1982, McVay was stricken while officiating the Michigan State at Illinois game on national television. His passing, though untimely, occurred in a way he had wanted it to be. He once related, "If I should die at an early age, I hope it happens at the 50-yard line and on national television." He went down at the 48-yard line and on national television.
